What is the Uncommitted Overdraft Facility?

Overdraft facility is a short-term credit agreement that allows the account holder to withdraw money or execute payment transactions even in case the available balance of the current account reaches zero, but, in any case, within the credit limit approved by the Bank.

The overdraft facility is offered by the Bank to account holders qualifying as non-retail clients and is available only for current account opened with the Bank and denominated in Euros.

The overdraft facility is uncommitted and repayable on demand. Therefore, the Bank does not have any obligation to honour a request for a utilisation and is entitled to demand repayment of the outstanding balance of the current account at any time and at its sole discretion.

Interest will be calculated on a daily basis on the amount outstanding, usually at a margin over base rate and they accrue until the date on which the current account balance is restored to zero or positive values. All the debit interests accrued in a year are counted by the Bank on 31 December and become due and payable on 1 March of the year following the year in which they accrued, or immediately, in the case of termination of the agreement.

The main risks

The main risks are:

- unfavourable changes in the financial conditions. However, this risk is limited by the corresponding right of the client, in the case of unfavourable changes, to withdraw from the agreement without cost and without penalty within 60 days of the notification of the changes, and to obtain, at the time of termination of such agreement, term and conditions previously applied;
- in case of variable interest, the increase in the rate from the initial interest rate;
- the bank's decline to grant the overdraft for one or more utilisation;
- the circumstances that the Bank may at any time, by giving a 10 business day prior written notice to the client, cancel the available overdraft limit in whole or in part and declare that the overdraft outstanding, including accrued interest and any other amounts due by the client are due and payable within 10 business days of receipt by the client of the notice
